The vast majority of deals involving private debt finance in 2022 so far have targeted North America, with 202 out of 289 deals involving North America-based portfolio companies. Globally, 27 deals were in the consumer products segment, of which 18 were in North America. Most private debt facilities supported growth capital deals, including the $355 investment by L Catterton in iFIT Inc., a fitness technology company, showing how private debt is being used more to facilitate corporate expansion than for financial engineering.
